KANADA'S LOST MEGA CITIES

The 1920s Spanish Revival theatre by architect Murray Brown was an ornate and showy presence downtown here. And it was a place where many locals not only saw movies and plays but also performed in local productions or attended graduation ceremonies.

SMUDGING AND BEADS SOUR LAND AND BATH, ONTARIO

Loyalist, Near Bath, Ontario @44.205438, -76.726958 goo.gl/maps/SqMESNcdVJst5Dbo6

Etymology Online's definition: BATH, bæð [Old English] "an immersing of the body in water, mud, etc.," also "a quantity of water, etc., for bathing," from *badan [Proto-Germanic] (source also of beth [Old Frisian], bath [Old Saxon], bað [Old Norse], Bad [German] bat [Middle Dutch]), from PIE root *bhē- "to warm" + *-thuz, Germanic suffix indicating "act, process, condition" (as in birth, death).

This Baed once laid in, perhaps the ancient aboriginal clay beads so comfortable it was used for beds. Suez dr. in Sudbury perhaps a sewage ditch. Cavendish in Burlington perhaps a caved in dish. The Devil's Punchbowl, perhaps the Witches Cauldron? Perhaps the ancient smudging art may have occurred here near appropriate muds and gingers? This large depression in Bath Ontario sits near sculpted tree lines. Clays are known to pull toxins out from the body. etymonline.com/search?q=bath

THE FLAVIAN AMPHITHEATRE

books.google.ca/books?id=_iYq5K-SJ9MC

COMMONLY CALLED THE

COLOSSEUM AT ROME:

ITS HISTORY AND SUBSTRUCTURES
COMPARED WITH OTHER AMPHITHEATRES

It is true that Pliny calls it a theatre and not an amphi-theatre, and this has deceived scholars, who do not perceive that the two names were used quite indifferently at that period. Pliny himself contrasts it with the great theatre of Pompey, built long afterwards, and when the city had increased so much, yet which only held 40,000 people, while this building would hold 80,000.

by Parker, John Henry, 1806-1884

On the level of the ground were marble columns by the hundred, on the first floor glass columns (the only instance on record), on the upper floor they were of gilt wood. Pliny says that part of this insane work was only calculated to be of a temporary character, and it was in fact all destroyed by fire a few years afterwards, and the glass columns perished equally with those of gilt wood ; he also adds that other parts were calculated to be eternal, and this equally applies to the part we have remaining, the great substructures, which being underground, and built of large blocks of tufa, would last as long as the hills if let alone.
